MORE FEATURES NEEDED IN HAWAII'S BUILDING.

Criticism in no spirit of "knocking" but aimed to be fair and constructive is coming back to Hawaii from San Francisco that the territory's building lacks some exhibit features which may easily be supplied.

A recent visitor at the exposition—and a friend of Hawaii—ventures the opinion that Canada is securing the best attention of the traveling public by its well-chosen exhibits portraying the many attractions of the northern play-land for the leisure class of tourists—hunters, fishermen, golfers, mountain-climbers and the like. The Canadian display is designed especially for this end.

Now there is no need for Hawaii to imitate Canada or any other place. But if the criticism against the territorial building—that it lacks several desirable features which could be furnished with little trouble—if this criticism is well-founded, and some of it must be, it is not too late to amend the conditions.

One excellent suggestion of an informal nature has reached the Star-Bulletin—that some of the big game-fish found in Hawaiian waters should be mounted and placed on display in the building. The local Izaak Walton and visiting fishermen have been making some remarkable catches. Only a few days ago two ono or "king-fish," one more than 50 and the other more than 54 inches in length, were captured off Waikiki beach. Huge tuna abound in Hawaiian waters and are caught frequently.

It is safe to say that if the Hawaii Tuna Club were asked to secure big game-fish for mounting, it would do so in short order.

Through such special appeals to special classes of tourists Hawaii can get the most good out of the exposition building and exhibits.

The fair commission has been handicapped, it is true, by lack of funds, necessitating a continuous scaling down of plans for many months before the exposition opened. But now that a definite need appears to have been pointed out, why not see what can be done to fill it? The exposition is only two months old. It has six months yet to run. By far the largest crowds are still to visit the Hawaii building. The big opportunity to attract tourists is still in the future, but it is an immediate future, and every avenue of approach should be utilized.

Singing boys and painted fish, say those who have visited the exposition, are not enough. Yet it's not too late to remedy whatever defect exists. Quick action is necessary.

THE CHINESE SITUATION.

China's diplomatic delays in meeting the Japanese demands are evidently for two main reasons. First and most important is the hope of arousing a protest against the demands on the part of the United States and perhaps even of influencing Great Britain to utter a cautious warning; and secondly, to take what military steps the young republic can, so that if Japan resorts to force, the task of subduing China will not be entirely easy.

As to the first, there are external evidences that China relies upon the intercession of American residents with the United States government. Such an intercession was the 5000-word appeal cabled by American missionaries to President Wilson a few days ago. When Bishop Bashford passed through Honolulu on his way to the states, he would not confirm the report that he was to see President Wilson and lay the situation before him, but both in the Orient and in America that report was given publicity when the bishop started for the states. He is a firm friend of China and his is an influential voice. While in Honolulu he authorized the statement that if the newspaper reports of the Japanese demands were true, the situation was very grave. As the days pass, it is seen that the newspaper reports may be regarded as correct.

What representations are being made at Washington none know except the principal parties—the president, the state department, probably the Japanese ambassador and the Chinese minister; and in the Orient, Minister Reinsch at Peking. The impression steadily gains ground that appeals from several sources have reached the Wilson administration.

As to the second probable main cause for China's refusal to yield to what might appear the inevitable: The Chinese military preparation, though it appears feeble enough in the face of Japan's splendid war-machine, will help the Chinese to carry on a long fight in some of the provinces.

Military preparation is rather openly carried on in Mukden, according to news by mail from the Orient to Honolulu. In one week seventeen carloads of military supplies are reported to have been shipped from the Mukden arsenal to Peking and other points. The supplies included field and mountain guns, hand rifles and ammunition. On March 18, 330,000 rounds of ball cartridges were sent to the brigade in barracks two miles from Mukden. Furthermore, the Chinese civil governor at Mukden, it is reported, openly asserts that neither President Yuan Shih-kai nor the people of China will yield in matters infringing Chinese sovereignty or the rights of other powers in China. He says China will not consent to Japanese demands for land-ownership, residence and trade throughout South Manchuria, the principal objection being that foreigners carry with them extra-territorial privileges, including exemption from Chinese taxation and that China "awaits with confidence the termination of the European war when the powers will be free to deal with the Far Eastern situation."

He also asserts that China perhaps could grant nine-tenths of Japan's demands, but that the remaining one-tenth she would, "if necessary, forcibly resist."

Japan might take every port and principal city in China and still the great nation would be unsubdued. There would remain millions ready to carry on the unequal fight against the invader. It took many revolutions to overthrow the Manchus, but they were overthrown at last. The idea that Japan can conquer 400,000,000 people in any brief period of time is ill-based.

There are indications now that Japan is yielding some material points in the demands. Very likely in the next few days large concessions will be made. Neither at home nor abroad is Baron Kato's policy supported with anything like the unity of sentiment necessary to carry it through.

YOU'LL LIKE MAY DAY.

If you want to see a pretty and picturesque pageant of children, go to Punahou tomorrow afternoon. The annual May Day Fete for the benefit of the Free Kindergarten and Children's Association is to be this year more charming than ever. Eight hundred children will take part and the costuming will be extremely pretty.

There's just one thing to be regretted about the May Day Fete—that it could not be held while the congressmen are here. They would like to see this wonderful race-mingling in a melting-pot of happy, youthful frolicking.

Evidently the Turks are also waging civilized warfare. Their official bulletins deny all reported gains of the Allies and assert a few advances on their own account.

Perhaps Hawaii and Maui are getting all of the rain out of their systems before the congressmen arrive.

The Sick Man of Europe is still able to announce his condition as satisfactory.

Is Japan subjecting those demands to revision downward?

JOHN F. HALEY: Tomorrow I will be the new collector of internal revenue and tomorrow is when I'll announce my appointments.

—WILLIAM LARSEN, supervisor: I have been in favor of disbanding the Hawaiian band for a long time. The money could be used to better advantage. A band is a luxury.

—SECRETARY THAYER: It should be emphasized that the big ball for the congressional party on Monday night is an event at which everybody is welcome. No special invitations have been issued by the governor.

—DELEGATE KUHIO: By all means the congressional party around the islands should be supplied with an interpreter and one who can supply information concerning the history and ancient customs of the Hawaiians. John Wise can fill the bill.

'HANDS-AROUND' CLUB PLANNING LUSTY WELCOME

Arrangements are almost complete for the international dinner to the congressional party at the Outrigger Club grounds next Wednesday evening. The executive committee of the Hands-Around-the-Pacific movement will hold a final luncheon at the University Club tomorrow at noon, when the list of speakers will be selected and the decorating committee for the several national tables appointed.

At the Outrigger grounds the big cement lanai has been enlarged so that the men's and women's lanais under the hau trees may be thrown into one; the fencing has been moved back from the Ewa side and a space arranged where the Hawaiians may build an imu for the baking of the mullet course in t-telaves which they will provide; the Chinese will have their kitchen and cooking utensils here; as will the Japanese and here will be the big army oven, so that the early comers may see how each nationality prepares its particular dish.

There will be a table for each country about the big ocean, and a speaker from each; Hawaiian and Filipino music will enliven the feast and on the women's lanai the ladies of the congressional party will be feasted and entertained by a committee of ladies from each nationality. It is expected that considerably more than 300 including the guests, will sit down to the big international feed. The ladies will be so seated that they will hear the speeches. In the afternoon the big canoes will be at the service of any of the visiting party. From the railway station the congressional party will be taken direct to Waikiki on the arrival of the train from Leilehua at 5 p. m., so that at 5:30 the dinner may begin, and at 6 o'clock the speeches will start, as many of the congressmen wish to get away by 8:30, while others will go direct from the feast to the steamer, which leaves at 10 p. m.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY BRINGS IN 13 INDICTMENTS

Thirteen indictments were returned by the federal grand jury this morning in a partial report to Judge Chas. P. Clemons. Since the jury convened nearly a month ago it has done a large amount of work, more than a score and a half of indictments have ing been returned. It is believed that the jury has about completed its work and shortly will close the present session.

The indictments returned today were ordered placed on the secret file. It is expected that bench warrants for the arrest of the defendants will be issued this afternoon, in which case there may be several arraignments tomorrow morning. Several of the defendants are said to be already in custody. The grand jury probably will be in session again Monday morning.

It is no credit to a man to keep his word because no one will take it. Some people go through life looking as if they were sorry they had ever started.

QUEEN'S PORTRAIT IS UNVEILED AT SCHOOL

Queen Liliuokalani, now seldom seen in public, was an interested spectator at the unveiling ceremony of a large portrait of herself in the Liliuokalani school, Kaimuki, this morning. The portrait is a gift to the school from the Mothers' Club of Kaimuki. It is a reproduction of the painting of the queen hanging in the Capitol gallery.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Kinney and Inspector General Raymond were also present.

But 5,000 people attended Billy Sunday's meeting in Peterson, and these were lacking in enthusiasm.
